

Corporate Profile

History and Growth

Seagrass Software Limited was established in 1999 after being awarded a prestigious contract to develop an expert database system for a Plc for valuing and managing their traded endowment policies. CEO and founder, Simon Pickering, a graduate from the University of Birmingham, spent 8 years at Rolls Royce developing safety related software for the military before going into business for himself.

Several years on, Seagrass has grown to be a highly competitive, leading edge specialist in networked database solutions. It has a small, but talented, software development team, a wealth of experience in the financial and legal sectors and a persevering desire to be the best.

Our Approach

Our forte is developing server-side Web Applications that result in the ultimate "Thin Client". This type of system requires only a web browser to be installed on workstations, which dramatically reduces the cost of maintenance (cost of ownership) and hardware.

A Web Application can be used from anywhere, allowing your staff to work from home or abroad and share data with colleagues. This is great for sales teams who need to share information with head office or distribution centres.

Our approach brings companies together allowing systems to be closely integrated, e.g. with call centres, legal services or marketing companies. The Seagrass approach allows collaboration not only within companies but also between them.
